The Review

Set mid-mountain at tony Deer Valley Resort, European-style Chateaux at Deer Valley — now managed by the team behind Stein Eriksen Lodge — is just 150 yards from the closest lift. When Deer Valley's lifts start churning in the morning, most skiers are shuffling into the line at the base of the mountain — but guests of the Chateaux are already laying first tracks. Making it all possible is the hotel's stellar service — capable staff caters to skiers' every whim, from putting out your dry skis and boots first thing in the morning, to collecting skis upon arrival for overnight storage, to guiding those who have lost their way navigating the resort's 2,026 snowy acres.

This attention to detail is evident in the 142 rooms, which range from 350-square-foot guestrooms to four-bedroom suites and are dressed in French country style, with wrought iron chandeliers, red and cream floral sofas and exposed beams. Skiers will especially appreciate thoughtful touches such as heated towel racks, extremely soft pillowtop mattresses and gas fireplaces.

After a day on the hill, schussers can slide into the spa — upgraded just last season — where a European-influenced treatment menu maximizes the marine-based Phytomer product line. After repairing your body, refuel for tomorrow's pow runs at Cena Ristorante, which serves fortifying portions of Italian dishes (antipasti, flatbread pizzas, homemade pastas) and pours brews by local faves like Squatters and Wasatch.

Chateaux at Deer Valley is just 150 yards from the closest Deer Valley lift.

While there's plenty to keep you within the Deer Valley enclave, the Chateaux makes it easy to explore the area. A shuttle brings guests down the mountain and into downtown Park City, home to more than 100 restaurants and 20 bars and clubs.
