The Look

Along the roaring Gore Creek at the westernmost foot of Vail Mountain, the newly renovated Vail Cascade delivers the conveniences and amenities of a megaresort in an incredibly intimate setting. The $30 million renovation instantly upped its cache, strengthening the hotel's connection to the outdoors and adding an infinity pool and a patio area with firepits that stretches from the hotel to the creek. At on-site restaurant Atwater on Gore Creek, stacks of cut lodgepole pine frame a rambling mural of the rushing water. A steel-clad see-through fireplace adds warmth to the room, while soaring windows frame the mountains and open onto a new patio, perfect for warm-weather dining.

Bed & Bath

The hotel's 292 rooms and suites — many with balconies and fireplaces — are decked out with snappy red and beige striped carpeting, crisp neutral bedding, and fluffy pillows and comforters. Rich wood accents add that lodgey vibe typical of ski hotels, but there's a 42-inch flatscreen TV, iPod dock and wifi if you need to stay connected to the world. Big bathrooms are stocked with environmentally friendly bath products.

Beyond

The hotel's enormous fitness facility is one of the best in the Vail Valley. Indoor tennis, basketball, volleyball, racquetball and squash courts, plus a lap pool, are complemented by a parade of cutting-edge fitness classes — everything from power Pilates to cardio tennis. While the atmosphere is welcoming, this is a serious workout facility where it's not unusual to find yourself one spin bike away from an Eco-Challenge athlete.

In the Area

What? You don't want to ski? No problem, Vail's mountaintop playground offers alternative activities such as tubing, snowshoeing, bungee trampolining and ski biking. If you are a skier, Vail's famous Back Bowls are 3,000 acres of wide open, mostly ungroomed terrain cherished by snowriders. Get on the mountain early, and work up an appetite for lunch at Two Elk, a soaring timber lodge at 11,220 feet with views of the Gore Range and a wicked good burger. Apres ski, store your skis and head to Pepi's for a drink, then wander around Vail's pedestrian-friendly village, styled like an Austrian ski town.
